TO OBSERVE OLD CUSTOMS.

King Haakon to Be Coronated Like

Ancient Monarchs.

(By Associated Press.)

CHRISTIANIA, June 2.—At the coronation of King Haakon June 22 all the old Norwegian customs will be observed. The king will make the historic journey to Drontheim, through the Gudbrandsdal valley, which is the center of the tourist traffic in the east of Norway, then will take ship at Romsdalsjord and proceed to Drontheim.

The old mansion where all previous Norwegian monarchs have been crowned will be used.

The building is situated near the cathedral and it has always been the custom for the king to walk to the church. Perhaps out of regard for Queen Maud, King Haakon will disregard this precedent and drive to the cathedral.

The Dyspeptic.

I think of happy days gone by
When I was gay and free
When I could order apple pie
Or tell the cook an oyster fry
Was suitable forme.
But now I murmur with a sigh,
"A little toast and tea!"
When tiny bubbles laugh and die
Like other joys that flee.
When sunbeams gathered from the sky
By thrifty grapes unfettered fly.
To gild the revelry,
The only toast that I may try
Is "Down with toast and tea!"
The rarest perfume mount on high.
Delicious as can be!
Brolled lobster—terrific—Oh, my!
How do they haunt my wishful eye.
With dreams of vanished glee!
They still exist, I'm told, Oh why
Must I have toast and tea?

RIGHT SIDE OF A CAR.

Experienced Travelers Have a Reason For Sitting There.

When you are traveling and enter a sleeping car, chair car or day coach and want to find the traveling men, look on the right side of the cars. You can tell "drummers," of course, without that, but if you go into any railway train you will find the commercial travelers—the men who make a business of traveling—all riding on the right hand side.

If you want to test this, go some time to the sleeping car chart at any station and you will find the right hand berths sold and the left hand ones mostly vacant.

The custom, which has grown greatly, is extremely noticeable even to railway men, and the makers of sleeping cars would put all the berths on the right hand side if they could. The demand for berths on the right hand side is enormous.

It is not habit or superstition with these old travelers; it is based on experience, and the cause is twofold. Force of habit, the "rule of the road," for hundreds of years will cause most persons to take the right hand side naturally, but this applies to traveling men no more than to the ordinary traveler.

Yet, while the commercial travelers will fight almost for the right hand seats, there are three big roads in the United States where the demand is for left hand seats and berths.

All but three of the big roads of the United States follow the "rule of the road"—that is, they run their trains on the right hand track of the double tracked line. The right hand side of the car is therefore the farthest removed from the trains passing in the opposite direction, and passengers on that side escape the noise and dirt. In the night they are not awakened by the crash of passing trains, although they may suffer more from passing long lines of cars on side tracks.

The chief reason, however, that the traveling men choose the right hand side is for greater safety, as the left hand side of the train running on the right hand track is exposed to danger from passing trains. All old travelers expect some time to be in an accident, and they do not overlook any safeguards. They know that at any time some big piece of freight from some passing freight train might be jostled loose and rip through the sides of the fast train going in the opposite direction. They know that some loose door of a freight car, caught in the suction between the trains, may rip a hole in the sleeping car's side. They know it is possible for one of the heavy mail bag catchers on a small train to tear through the sides of a half a dozen cars going in the opposite direction if some one left it sticking out through carelessness.

Also they know that when fast trains are hurried into sidings by misplaced switches the left hand side suffers most.

So the veterans with the travel worn grips claim and pre-empt the right hand seats and berths everywhere, and the rest of the public is no wiser.—Chicago Tribune.

Breathing Carbonic Acid.

It is well known that a very much larger proportion of carbonic acid than usually exists in the atmosphere can be inhaled with impunity, but only in recent times have we been aware of the large quantity that can be breathed without actual danger. Ordinary fresh air contains but four parts in 10,000, yet the carbonic acid has to reach 3 per cent, or 100 times the usual quantity, before any difference is noticed in the respiration. As the percentage rises the person breathing it begins to pant, but with air containing as much as 10 per cent only a headache is produced, although the panting is violent. The actual danger point is not reached until the carbonic acid rises to 18 per cent. Foul air in a room where a number of persons are present is not dangerous on account of the carbonic acid it contains, but owing to a poisonous organic substance given off with the breath. Carbonic acid is not a direct poison, but when the danger point is reached the air can take none from the blood in the lungs, so that the fires of the human engine are extinguished by their own smoke, as it were. It is really wonderful what the human engine will endure, for a candle goes out when the oxygen in the air sinks to 18.5 instead of the usual 21 per cent, and the carbonic acid rises to 2.5.—Chambers' Journal.

What "Hauir" Meant.

Though the Scottish guard of France had long lost its natural character, it jealously retained until the crash of 1789 all its curious old privileges, which, though they led to constant wrangles with other regiments, had been duly allowed by Louis XIV. He was actually obliged to intervene at his own wedding to compose a dispute as to the precedence of the Scots guards and the Cent gentilshommes. "Proud as a Scotchman" was an old proverb in France, and their successors in the bodyguard did their best to justify it. But the most curious survival, long after a word of Scotch had been heard in the corps, was the practice of answering "hauir" (a corruption for "I am here") when the roll was called, which was religiously maintained, at all events, down to the revolution.—Macmillan's Magazine.

SHOOTING PAINS

In the temples—dull aches across the forehead—blurred vision—letters or lines running into one another—skipping of words or letters in reading—seeing objects double—flicking specks that come and go—aversion to bright light—a confusion of objects which can be relieved by closing the eyes momentarily—that tired feeling in and back of the eyes—Inflammation in the minute veins covering the "whites of the eyes" are all symptoms of optical defects that we can remedy with a properly adjusted glass. ## GRACE and STYLE

The style of coat worn this season has been compared to a pleasure yacht—long and rakish with low slender lines fore and aft, and fronts as sharply cut as a bowsprit. Everything trim, shapely, graceful.

Compare the long, graceful coats of the new style with the tight-fitting short jackets that were the rage only a few seasons ago. What a contrast! It is the extremes which mark the epochs in the history of dress.

The present style is sensible as well as graceful and will likely continue in favor for a good while.

It's a style that rightly made is superb; wrongly made, you'll not like it.

The close-fitting back just touches the waist line at precisely the right place. If it touches the wrong place the coat is both uncomfortable and unsightly.

Our big range of sizes enables us to carry out exactly the same style-idea to fit every man perfectly, whether he is short, tall or medium.

Greys are very popular and we have a distinguished line of them in beautiful shades—a line that is alone in its smartness and faultless making.

Prices, $12, $15, $18, $20, $25, $30.
